Government Involvement in Academic Standards

Education Minister David King recently released the findings of a report on public reaction to government involvement in student achievement. The report, compiled by Gordon Mowat, indicates that "there is considerable public support for greater provincial government involvement in setting academic standards and testing student achievement in Alberta schools."

The report was compiled from August through December of 1979, and is titled "Public Reaction to Recommendations from the Minister's Advisory Committee on Student Achievement." The recommendations in the report are based on information gathered from briefs and hearings, and a Gallup poll. Seventy-four individuals and sixty groups submitted briefs, and thirty-five representatives attended public hearings to put forward their positions.

The briefs and hearings focussed on three major recommendations of the Advisory Committee: that Alberta Education establish a Student Evaluation Policies Board; a province-wide testing program be conducted annually to monitor student achievement; and mandatory grade twelve examinations not be reinstated. Conclusions drawn from the presentations suggest that there is little support for a Student Evaluation Policies Board. Support is extensive, however, for a province-wide program that would provide individual, class, school and provincial scores. Opinion is divided on the reinstatement of mandatory grade twelve departmental examinations. Individuals tend to favor reinstatement, while groups favored some change but not necessarily returning to the old type of departmental examinations.

An October 1979 Gallup poll surveyed 1,064 adults on six general topics. Forty-nine percent of those interviewed feel that the testing of achievement in schools is unsatisfactory. An overwhelming seventy-nine percent believe that the government should establish standards that apply to all schools. Sixty percent thought that students wishing university entrance should be subjected to standards which need not be applied to other students. Fifty-one percent of the people surveyed believe that the government should have strong involvement in setting requirements for university entrance and in evaluating achievement. Thirty-five percent thought that the universities should set their own standards.

In commenting on the report, Mr. King said "This report completes the four-year task by the Advisory Committee to review the quality and standards of basic education in Alberta. The government now has all the information necessary for making a decision, which, I hope, will be announced during the summer." □

■ Dental Plan

The latest information available to NASA now indicates that we will not be able to select an insurance company to underwrite the Dental Plan until 21 May 1980. That is the date now scheduled for a meeting between the Board and NASA to go over the insurance company bids and make the selection. The reason for the bids not being available earlier is that they are compiled by the company head offices, usually Montreal or Toronto, and data on the number of employees (single or married; number of dependents, etc.) have had to be forwarded to the head offices.

The plan will be essentially as outlined in the current NASA newsletter but members will not be able to claim reimbursement for work done since 1 April until the company is selected and the claim forms are made available. I regret the delays on this, but I hope you will understand that they are unavoidable.

Manager, NASA*

Dr. C.M. Rodkiewicz (centre) is presented with the Fellowship of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers by Dr. D. Zwieg (right; the President of the ASME) and Dr. H. Reeder (left; the Vice-President of the ASME for the Pacific Region). Seated is Alberta labor minister Les Young. The award was made on 10 April 1980.
